Special sections of some courses such as, golf, bridge and slim and trim are designated for seniors only to focus on their specific needs. Many courses are offered at apartments, senior adult centers and other off-campus locations to allow easy access for older adults. Gold Card bearers are admitted free of charge to all Community Services sponsored cultural events.

The Community Services Program has initiated classes for hospital patients. These programs have demonstrated great therapeutic value, both physical and mental for older persons.

A "Friendship Line" is starting as a pilot project to link home-bound older persons with trained volunteer telephone friends.

Two week seminar on Successful Retirement Planning, May 1976.

A course on the middle years, including discussion on coping with aging parents, was offered in Spring 1976.

ABSTRACT

This directory, designed to inform educators, professionals, and students of the nature and location of gerontology-related courses, degree programs, research programs, educational services, and training programs, contains information on the gerontological activities of 1,275 colleges and universities in the United States. (Data were collected between January and July of 1976, using a survey instrument.) It is arranged alphabetically by State, with college and university entries also listed alphabetically under each State. The District of Columbia, the Canal Zone, Guam, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands are also included. Each entry includes the name of the institution, institutional level, geographical location, contact person, and information on the specific type of institutional activity concerned with gerontology. The information on institutional activity is listed according to the following 12 categories, which are described in the directory key: I--Educational opportunities, etc., offered to older adults, II--gerontology courses normally offered in a 2-year period to undergraduate or graduate students, III--other courses which include content on aging, IV--degree programs with important gerontological or geriatric components, V--developments underway on aging, VI--financial aid, VII--short-term training, VIII--research and development projects in progress or planned, IX--consortia, X--programs or services available to part-time students, and XI--other comments. Subject and college indexes and the survey instrument are appended. (SH)

Documents acquired by ERIC include many informal unpublished materials not available from other sources. ERIC makes every effort to obtain the best copy available. Nevertheless, items of marginal reproducibility are often encountered and this affects the quality of the microfiche and hardcopy reproductions ERIC makes available via the ERIC Document Reproduction Service (EDRS). EDRS is not responsible for the quality of the original document. Reproductions supplied by EDRS are the best that can be made from the original.

This Directory was prepared by the Association for Gerontology in Higher Education under Administration on Aging Grant Number 90–A–772/01.

INTRODUCTION

The National Directory of Educational Programs in Gerontology is the result of an Administration on Aging grant to the Association for Gerontology in Higher Education, a national organization of over 50 colleges and universities, headquartered in Washington, D.C. The Directory was compiled at the Faye McBeath Institute on Aging and Adult Life at the University of Wisconsin, under the direction of Martin B. Loeb, Past-President of the Association and Betsy M. Sprouse, Project Director and Editor.

The first edition of the Directory is designed to inform educators, professionals, and students of the nature and location of gerontology-related courses, degree programs, research programs, educational services and training programs. The information contained in the Directory was collected between January and July of 1976, using a survey instrument which can be found in the Appendix. The information for each college or university refers, for the most part, to the academic year 1975-76. The questionnaire responses were edited to correspond with the Directory format, and some interpretations of the data were necessary. While it was impossible to permit each of the 1,275 institutions included in the Directory to review their own entries, every effort was made to accurately interpret and report the material submitted. For this reason, the Association for Gerontology in Higher Education cannot guarantee the accuracy of all the information in the Directory. It is the responsibility of the individual reader interested in a particular college or university to verify the accuracy of the material with the contact person listed for that institution. The Association for Gerontology in Higher Education anticipates updating the Directory biennially, which should increase the accuracy of Directory entries in future editions.

On behalf of the Association for Gerontology in Higher Education, I would like to thank the people who helped in the preparation of this Directory--those who responded to the detailed questionnaire, our colleagues at the Administration on Aging and at the Gerontological Society, and those from various colleges and universities who contributed their ideas. I would especially like to extend our appreciation to the Project Staff at the Faye McBeath Institute on Aging and Adult Life who donated so much of their time and resources to the preparation of the Directory. In addition to Betsy Sprouse, who carried the heaviest load of this project, the Association is grateful to the Institute's Director, Martin B. Loeb and to Marie Salen, Andrea Ernst, Janet Wolf and Sally Shukur.

INSTRUCTIONS TO THE READER

This Directory contains information on the gerontological activities of 1,275 colleges and universities in the United States--approximately one-third of the total number of higher education institutions. It is divided by states, and also includes the District of Columbia, the Canal Zone, Guam, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. The states and territories are in alphabetical order, with college and university entries listed in alphabetical order within each state.

How to Find Gerontology "Programs"

The state groupings are separated by a divider page that lists the colleges and universities within each state that have an identifiable gerontological component. This means that the institution has an individual, office, program or center whose title or designation contains one of the terms of the field: gerontology, geriatrics, aging, older adults, senior citizens, etc., or that the institution offers a degree or a certificate in gerontology. The functions of these gerontology components are catagorized as Training (degree and short-term training, including courses), Research, Service (educational and other services to older adults), Courses (within other disciplinary degrees) or Degrees (in gerontology). It is hoped that these lists will help the reader to locate the colleges and universities which have a unit or individual designated for their programs in gerontology. Many of the decisions made about identifying institutions for these state listings and categorizing their major functions were subjective editorial ones, and the Association for Gerontology in Higher Education apologizes for any misrepresentations or omissions.

Besides the information listed on the divider pages on specific institutions with gerontology-related components, each group contains information on other colleges and universities that submitted information for the Directory.

Interpreting the Coding System

The inside of the front cover contains the Key for the main body of information in the Directory. The entries are divided into roman numerals, and the content under each roman numeral is described in the Key.

On the top of each entry, you will see four coding notations. They can be interpreted as follows:

CODE: A four-digit number which identifies each institution in the survey sample, followed by a series of capital letters indicating the level of the institution as follows:

JCC: Junior Colleges and Community Colleges - Offers two to four years of study beyond the high school level; awards both Associate Degrees and Certificates.

VTI: Vocational and Technical Institutes - Post high school study in various vocational and technical fields; may award Associate Degrees or Certificates.

C: Colleges - Includes upper division (last two undergraduate years) colleges and other four year college programs that offer Baccalaureate Degrees.

U: Universities - Offers full range of Baccalaureate Degree programs as well as various Associate and Graduate Degree programs.

PS: Professional Schools - Offers Master's and Doctoral Degrees in specialized areas, including Medicine, Law, Dentistry, Theology.

ND: Non-Degree Granting Institutions - Various institutions and schools which offer undergraduate and graduate programs but do not confer degrees. Includes some seminaries and institutions which have non-degree offerings.

ID: A four-digit number assigned to all questionnaires returned with information included in the Directory.

HEWREG: Refers to the ten Administrative regions delineated by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare. The states are assigned to regions as follows:

Region I - Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Vermont.

Region II - New Jersey, New York, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands

Region III - Delaware, District of Columbia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia, West Virginia.

Region IV - Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee.

Region V - Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio, Wisconsin.

Region VI - Arkansas, Louisiana, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Texas.

Region VII - Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska.

Region VIII - Colorado, Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota, Utah, Wyoming.

Region IX - Arizona, California, Hawaii, Nevada, Samoa, Guam, Trust Territories.

Region X - Alaska, Idaho, Oregon, Washington.

STATE: A two-digit number assigned to the alphabetical ordering of 55 states and territories.

Interpreting the Entries

The entries begin with the institution's name and address on the left of the page. The individual on the top right is the contact person for the institution's gerontological programs, as defined on the first page of the questionnaire (see Appendix). Courses, research programs, etc. may also identify a contact person. If no name or telephone number is listed under the various roman numerals, contact the individual given at the top of the page.

The Association for Gerontology in Higher Education strongly recommends that persons interested in the programs of a particular college or university verify them with the identified contact person, since the information is subject to change.

V. The College participates in the Northeastern California Higher Education Council, a consortium of eight community colleges, one state college, and one state university. The Council is in the process of developing a gerontology program to avoid duplication on all campuses. It is likely that the center will be at the Chico State University in Chico, California.
The College of the Siskiyous is just beginning its involvement in the area of gerontology, but plans to expand its programs to coincide with area-wide plans and to serve older persons with direct educational services.

VIII. The Northeastern California Higher Education Council Task Force on Aging is in the process of conducting a needs assessment related to gerontology.

II. Because of the interdisciplinary curriculum,fields rather than courses are offered within the Human Service College. These fields are:

1. Human Behavior in Social Contacts
2. Interactional Social Processes
3. Modern Social Thought and its Foundations
4. Problems in Social Systems
5. Communication Theory and Practice
6. Human Service Program Management
7. Human Service Program Assessment
8. Governmental and Private Action Agencies
9. Programs for the Aging

Within each of these fields for the specialist in gerontology, research findings and other readings will be focused on the field of aging. Content of Field 9 includes: federal and state legislation for the aging; programs of private organizations; institutional care and programs to encourage independent living; planning for effective use of resources in programs for the aging; need for adapting delivery of services to beliefs, attitudes and behavior patterns of communities and intended recipients. For instructors for each of these fields contact Dr. Charles Freeman, Dean of the Human Service College, 966-5100.

III. In addition to seminars in the Fields, degree candidates write a thesis and attend a special series of all-college seminars in which eminent authorities discuss their research and programs.

IV. The Human Service College offers a specialization in gerontology. This is an interdisciplinary degree taught in small classes or seminars with the emphasis on applicability of the research and other materials that are read to the person's own work or interest. The theses are presented after completion to an all-college seminar comprised of fellow students and faculty for information and review.

V. Expansion of the offerings in social policy and aging. Contact: Wayne Vasey. Presently expanding course offerings at the graduate level to branch campuses located in St. Petersburg and Sarasota, Florida.

VI. The program has been supported and funded since 1967 by the Administration on Aging with eight to ten traineeships available per year. Stipends are awarded either through the university or the Administration on Aging, and are usually $900.00 per quarter with tuition support for AoA trainees. The univeristy also provides approximately three graduate assistantships to support the program.

VII. Tampa Bay Inter-College Training Projects on Aging funded by the State of Florida Aging and Adult Services Program Office. This project serves to provide short term training primarily to staff from federally assisted and private agencies serving older persons in Region VIII of Florida. Aging Studies Program faculty developed two video-tapes entitled, "Fundamentals of Gerontology" and "Motivation Techniques" which are being used in the training session. Contact: Wiley Mangum.

VIII. An evaluation and follow-up study of graduate in gerontology and their impact is under way. A life span crisis oriented study is being proposed and also one other study on the use and experience of time in the aged. The primary direction of the Aging Studies Program is moving into evaluation research and it is expected that the name will be changed in the near future to the Center for Applied Gerontology

IX. University of South Florida is a member of the Association for Gerontology in Higher Education.

X. The full range of Master's and undergraduate courses are offered and available for night students on a full-time or part-time basis.

XI. The University is expanding its curriculum, moving into evaluation research and expanding the program to the two other branch campuses of the University of South Florida. As mentioned earlier, they are in short term training, the development of training materials and in process of working out a collaborative doctoral program with the doctorate in psychology adding an emphasis on research and clinical gerontology.

Persons may earn either the Master of Arts, Master of Education or Doctor of Education Degree in Adult Education and concentrate in Gerontology or the Master of Social Work through the School of Social Work. Undergraduates have no specific concentration in gerontology, but may elect to take any of the courses listed above that have a 400 or 500 level course number.

V. The University of Georgia will soon be offering a Certificate in Gerontology at the graduate level. To earn the Certificate, students at the masters or doctoral level must complete the requirements for the degree in their own departments plus 25 quarter hours of course work in courses in gerontology and at least 5 quarter hours of a research or internship assignment. Persons are welcome who wish to earn only the IX. The Institute of Gerontology is a joint organization of the University of Michigan and Wayne State University, established in 1965. The Specialist in Aging Certificate Program is a joint program implemented through the Institute on both campuses, in conjunction with the graduate programs organized and developed independently within each university. In addition to the ties with Wayne State University, the Institute, in consortia with four community colleges in the greater Metropolitan Detroit area, has launched a two-year project entitled "Postretirement Education Models Project". This program will gain information on what types of courses are appropriate for older people, the feasibility of offering courses in non-traditional educational settings such as nursing homes, how faculty can best establish rapport with older persons, and appropriate teaching methodologies and administrative procedures for planning, developing and implementing courses.

IV. Certificate in Gerontology awarded to graduate students who receive regular graduate degrees and who meet the requirements of the concentration in gerontology. This concentration consists of at least nine (9) credit hours of courses on aging and a field experience of at least three credit hours.

V. In cooperation with appropriate academic units, the Center for Aging Studies will develop a survey course on "Concepts and Issues in Gerontology" for juniors, seniors and first graduate students. Additional courses on aging in Social Work and the Biological Sciences will be developed during 1976-77. The Center for Aging Studies plans to establish two-week summer institutes beginning June 1977.

VI. A limited number of traineeships in gerontology for students working on Master's degrees and fellowships in gerontology for doctoral students are awarded by the Center from the Administration on Aging training grant.

VII. Model Area Aging Training Project, focusing on inter-agency collaboration in service delivery and citizen-agency collaboration in service planning and development. Contact: Prof. Charles F. Mitchell, School of Social Work, 824 Clark Hall, 882-4048.

I. Training for students in geriatrics is conducted at the Newark Comprehensive Care Clinic. This Day Center for Senior Citizens provides comprehensive diagnostic and preventive health care to approximately 2,500 older persons in the greater Newark area and provides students from the Department of Dentistry and the Department of Medicine with training and experience in geriatric problems. It has been proposed that the same type of health care be offered to members of the community through referrals from the Newark Senior Citizen Commission.

II. Medical Aspects of the Aging Process, a 30 hour lecture series involving 14 departments of instruction offered to medical and dental students and graduate students for credit. The lecture series is also offered to faculty and community physicians for AMA accreditation, Category I, and to nurses, paramedical personnel and other health care professionals as Continuing Education Credit. Contact: Dr. John Bullock. The course is also offered as an integral part of the fourth year elective preceptorship in geriatrics. Contact: Dr. Bullock.

I. Adults aged 60 and over may enroll in any course at the College tuition free on a space available basis. The College has coordinated an Outreach Program of Multiphasic Health Screening Clinics for the elderly in two rural counties. This program is co-sponsored by the Franklin County Office for Aging. The services of the clinic are free to adults over age 60 and for $3.00 for persons under age 60. A follow-up and referral system involves the public health nurses of both Franklin and Essex counties.
The Clinic also has a guidance and medical supervision program which involves local physicians, hospital administrators and other public health officials. Students in Laboratory Technology, Nursing and Mental Health participate in the Clinic programs as volunteers.
A Senior Citizens Center is being established on the College campus which will allow older people a direct and immediate mechanism for providing input and planning into the College's educational programs in gerontology.

III. Developmental Psychology. Contact: Elizabeth Snow, 891-2915.

V. The College is developing a core curriculum in the field of gerontology to be incorporated into the Community Mental Health program. The development of the gerontology curriculum will be undertaken simultaneously with the structuring of various public service programs for older people. This program will award its graduates an Associate in Applied Science Degree in Community Mental Health, Gerontology Core. The program will be fully developed and operational in the Fall of 1977. Contact: James Posillico.

VII. Continuing Education and short-term training courses in gerontology are being developed through input provided to the College by its Elders Planning Board.

VIII. Research into the health care status of the elderly in rural communities continuing through the delivery of the Multiphasic Health Screening Clinic Program. Contact: James Posillico.

IX. One of the objectives of the College's program in aging is to establish a consortium with various community colleges and universities in Northern New York state.

X. Once developed, the Gerontology Program, as well as all Continuing Education and training workshops will be made available to part-time students and will be scheduled for evening hours to attract community people.

VII. (Continued)

Geriatric Nurse Practitioner Program has been offered as continuing education.

VIII. Research in the School of Medicine and Dentistry: basic science studies of immune response in aging; lipid changes in the blood in aging; characterization and management of pulmonary and urinary infections in the aged and chronically ill people; effectiveness of new types of influenza and pneumococcus vaccines; joint research with the School of Nursing into the role of the nurse in the care of chronically ill and aged persons in institutions; health services research and development dealing with more appropriate evaluation and placement of chronically ill and aged persons.

Research in the School of Nursing: a comparison of the effects of three modes of providing nursing to residents in housing units for the elderly; the effects of relocation on an aged institutionalized population as measured by changes in mortality rates; development of a nursing care model for chronically ill patients in long-term institutional settings; comparison of social activity and morale in an independent elderly population; sociological factors in stroke rehabilitation; characteristics of people who go to chiropractors; utilization of a geriatric nurse practitioner program to train medical nurse practitioners for practice in geriatric health care delivery settings; factors motivating the elderly to apply to health-related facilities; a study of coping abilities of a population awaiting admission to health-related facilities.

IX. The faculty of the School of Medicine and Dentistry are closely associated with Monroe Community Hospital.

I. Institute for Retirement Studies, an academic program and a retirement planning unit for persons aged 50 and over. The original purpose of the Institute was to facilitate the entry, re-entry and integration of older people into the regular student body. For a membership fee of $25.00 per semester, University courses may be taken for credit, audit or toward a degree. Students may attend part or full time but must register for a minimum of one University course per year. The Institute also offers its own non-credit courses, taught by University faculty and available only to Institute members.

The Retirement Planning Program provides professional service to business, industry and other organizations in the area of pre-retirement preparation and trains personnel to develop and carry out in-house retirement planning. Contact: Ruth D. Glick, Director, Crawford Hall, 386-2104.

Dr. Allenspach is arranging a workshop on biological theories of aging and he and Dr. Ronald Wiley (529-2353) have participated in the interdisciplinary courses on aging.

IV. Bachelor of Arts degree. Students can focus on gerontology, although there is no formal major at this time. The University is in the process, however, of developing one. Students working on master's degrees in sociology may use gerontology as a substantive area of concentration. The university hopes in the near future to have a master's degree in gerontology. Students working toward a Ph.D. in Psychology may, beginning in 1976-77, emphasize a gerontological component. As a general rule, the Scripps Foundation Gerontology Center serves as a clearing house for matters related to the University's educational programs, research and public service in aging. Contact: Robert Atchley.

V. It is planned that Social Gerontology may be offered more than once a year, beginning 1976-1977, at which time Robert Atchley will teach one section, and it is hoped that additional courses will be offered by the staff on the regional campuses of Miami University.

VIII. Students in the gerontology program are currently involved in conducting mini-workshops for youth (kindergarten through 12th grade) which focus on aging. The workshops include aspects of the aging process, in addition to ways in which youth may assist the elderly in their families, neighborhood and community. The programs include a slide presentation and simulation exercises to provide young people with opportunities to experience the physical changes which many of the elderly encounter.

Newsline...Gerontology, OSU, a monthly publication of the Program on Gerontology, has been developed to disseminate gerontological information to university students and faculty and interested persons and organizations in the community.

In 1976 the gerontology students, under the guidance of Project personnel, organized the Oregon State University Student Gerontological Society. This Society provides students with an opportunity to learn more about human development in the later adult years, to promote interest in gerontology careers and to provide volunteer experiences with older Americans.

For 1977, the Program on Gerontology is looking at conducting research, short-term training of nursing home personnel and educational programs for the elderly and their families in cooperation with a proposed local, comprehensive health care facility. The Pennsylvania State University is a member of the Association for Gerontology in Higher Education.

X. Various courses (i.e., IFS 349) are offered for credit at one or another of Penn State's Commonwealth Campuses or at Continuing Education settings.

XI. A Gerontology Center of the Institute for the Study of Human Development has as its purposes to promote study of aging, to stimulate communication among scholars and others, to expand education and training in aging, and to foster application of research to the field of practice in aging. Some 60 "Faculty Affiliates in Gerontology" participate in various activities in gerontology throughout the University. Its involvement with the coordination of training and stimulation of gerontology in areas throughout the campus also includes projects, such as a data management service system, for state agencies. The Department of Sociology's AGING (Archive of General Studies in Aging) is a resource for training and research. The gerontological Resource Collection serves research and instructional needs as well as those of practitioners and agency personnel.

V. There is some consideration being given to developing a course to train nursing home personnel, patient centered, whereby this facility's staff will go to certain nursing homes at regular intervals to teach them how to manage psychogeriatric problems.

VII. A number of programs are held each Fall and Winter, some in conjunction with the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, for the training of professionals who work in the field of aging such as nursing home personnel. Typical courses are: Clinical Gero-Psychiatry, Therapeutic Strategies: For Middle-Aged and Elderly Long-Term Care Patients.

VIII. A behavior modification project began in January, 1976. It is aimed at modifying the behavior of long-term psychiatric patients. It may include some geriatric patients.

IX. There has been a primary discussion with the Department of Primary Care, Family Practice at the Medical College of Wisconsin. They may be interested in cooperative efforts regarding teaching and training in the field of aging.

January 26, 1976

The Association for Gerontology in Higher Education, an alliance of 50 colleges and universities, is compiling a national Directory of educational programs in gerontology and geriatrics. This project is sponsored by the Administration on Aging, with a goal of developing a Directory that contains descriptions of activities in the field of aging at the colleges and universities in the United States.

Questionnaires are being sent to all college and university Presidents, Deans of law schools, Deans of medical schools, members of the Gerontological Society and Division 20 of the American Psychological Association, and participants in the recent series of National Science Foundation short courses on aging. Some of the questions may not be applicable to the programs at your institution, but please try to include as much information as you can about content on aging in the curricula of your college or university. It is likely that some people will receive more than one questionnaire, in which case we request that you pass the extra copy along to another faculty member at your school who is involved in gerontology or geriatrics. The more responses received from any one institution, the more accurate the Directory listing will be. However, if you receive a questionnaire and are not presently associated with an educational institution, please cut out your name and address label from the outer envelope, and return it to us in the inner envelope. This will eliminate the need for sending you a follow-up questionnaire.

The Questionnaire is somewhat detailed, but this is a necessary part of composing an accurate description of your college's gerontological activities for the Directory. In completing the questionnaire, you may find it helpful to make a copy of it to use as a working draft and to keep in your files. Please return your completed questionnaire to the address above by Friday, February 6, 1976. Your cooperation in this project is appreciated.

Respond to the following items on the basis of your knowledge of the academic programs of your college or university as a whole, or those of your own academic unit.

I. List educational opportunities, programs and other services offered to older adults. Specify the age of admission to the services, fees, and any qualifying requirements.

II. List gerontology courses offered to undergraduate or graduate students with name, campus address and phone number of instructor. Specify courses normally offered in any two-year period, and how frequently the courses are offered.

III. Describe briefly additional content on aging known to be included in more general courses, and specify the course title or the discipline. Give the name, campus address and telephone number of responsible faculty members.

IV. Describe degree programs offered at your college or university with important gerontological or geriatric components. Specify the level of degree (certificate, associate, baccalaureate, specialized, master's, doctoral), and the major areas of study. Name and identify the appropriate contact persons for these programs.

V. Describe developments underway or under consideration in courses on aging or degree programs with gerontological or geriatric components. Name and identify appropriate contact persons.

VI. Describe the types of financial aid available to students in gerontology or geriatrics at your institution. Specify source of aid, amounts usually available, and any necessary qualifications or restrictions.

VII. List short-term training or continuing education courses offered by your institution during the last two years or listed for offering within the next year for mid-career personnel in the field of aging, students, or the general public. Name and identify appropriate contact person for each offering.

VIII. Describe briefly research and development projects related to aging that are in progress or planned for the next year at your institution. Name and identify appropriate contact persons.

IX. Describe briefly any involvement with other colleges and universities in consortia or cooperative efforts for development in the field of aging. Name and identify appropriate contact persons.

X. Describe briefly any programs or services available to part-time or evening students, including courses on aging that are generally offered in the late afternoon or evening.

XI. Use this space for any other comments on the educational programs in gerontology or geriatrics at your institution.

HOW TO USE THE SUBJECT INDEX

The amount of information included in the Directory was such that stringent criteria for indexing it were necessary. Numerous topic areas related to gerontology were extracted from the institutional entries. The topic areas listed in the Index apply to the maximum number of educational programs included in the Directory.

The Index is organized around the topic areas as follows:

TOPIC AREA

Courses - Includes all existing and planned courses offered by the institutions, and is divided into undergraduate, graduate and field work (practicum, internship) courses. The page numbers immediately following the word "Courses" refer to courses whose curriculum level is not known.

Degrees - Includes existing and planned degrees related to gerontology. The numbers immediately after the word "Degrees" refer to degrees whose level is not known, and these are followed by Specialization (concentration, emphasis, specialty, etc.), Certificate, Undergraduate (exact level unspecified), Associate, Baccalaureate, Graduate (exact level unspecified), Masters and Doctoral degrees.

Continuing Education - Includes courses offered for Continuing Education credit, short-term training programs, and some non-credit courses.

Research and Development - Includes research projects and programs under development other than courses and degrees.
